

Kingsport Alliance for Continued Learning (KACL), in partnership with East Tennessee State University, was established in 1993 to provide adults, regardless of educational background or age, opportunities to attend stimulating courses, lectures and special events. A volunteer board of directors manages KACL and board members often serve as instructors. KACL greatly benefits from its ready access to ETSU faculty as they share their expertise in community outreach, as well as from talented local instructors with interesting topics.

Most classes are held on the campus of ETSU at Kingsport Downtown located in the Kingsport Center for Higher Education, 300 West Market Street, near City Hall and the Justice Center. The exceptions are occasional field trips.

Classes are informal with no homework, grades or tests. They offer the opportunity to indulge your intellectual curiosity, engage in discussion, and enjoy a congenial and cooperative setting among friends and neighbors.

Not familiar with KACL? You may attend any one class free and this term enjoy all of the Tuesday evening special sessions at no charge.

Registration begins September 25, 2017, by returning the enclosed Application for Membership along with a check for a Special Price, this term only, of $25 per person to KACL, ETSU at Kingsport Downtown. This fee covers all classes on this term's schedule, not per class. The fee covers as many classes as you would like to attend. Any events requiring additional fees (such as field trips) are clearly marked. EVENING SESSIONS ONLY (Oct. 10, 24, and Nov. 7, 14) are free!

REFUNDS: No refunds will be made after the first week of the term. (October 9, 2017) Requests for refunds must be made in writing and submitted to KACL. A $7.50 processing fee will be deducted from refunds.

PARKING AND ACCESS: ETSU at Kingsport Downtown parking is available in several city parking lots near KCHE, Kingsport Center for Higher Education on Clay and Market Streets. To avoid citations, please do not park in Congressman Phil Roe's parking lot. If you have parking questions, please call ETSU at Kingsport Downtown, 423-354-5200.

The KCHE classroom building may be entered through the Market Street front and side ground-level entrances. Physically handicapped members may enter through these doors. Persons with disabilities who require special assistance or seating are requested to call ETSU at Kingsport Downtown at 423-354-5200 for arrangements.
